SHOWDOWN ON A SHOWDOWN

William F. Leiserson, member of the National Labor Relations board, has proposed a stitch in time that might save the war and navy departments, the Roosevelt administration, thousands of workmen and their communities at least nine assorted headaches. Congress, he says, should declare a national policy on wage increases and the closed shop.

The alternative is to let the showdown that labor leaders are preparing to stage on the closed shop issue come to a crisis, probably in "little steel." This policy of drifting, pursued up to now, could have tremendous repercussions. Certainly the principle it involves is too important to be left any longer in the hands of an appointed board. The war labor board has had the dispute between the CIO and Bethlehem and Republic steel companies certified to it by Labor Secretary Perkins.

The labor board's predecessor came a cropper on the same issue in the Kearny and "captive mine" strikes. As Mr. Leiserson points out, "such general policies involve the maintenance or modification of legal rights and standards of living of large sections of the population and affect the whole war problem." There is no reason for leaving an issue of first rate importance to the decision of a board charged only with responsibility for making awards in particular instances.

In other words, policy-making is the function of congress. The function of the administrative department and especially of an appointed board operating within the department is to carry out policy. Until employers are guided by a legislative decision, they are free to use their own discretion about granting a closed shop, unless specific orders to do so have been issued. This will be a source of irritation until it has been removed by a conclusive congressional decision. The general idea seems to be to sidestep congress on the closed shop issue by letting appointees perform a congressional function. If congressmen don't resent this, some millions of their constituents on both sides of the closed shop issue do resent it. If a disastrous work stoppage growing out of a showdown can be averted by acting now, then now is the time to act.

RED NECK ITEM

It has made almost everybody feel a little better to see the photograph of the destroyer Shaw coming home from Pearl Harbor with a temporary bow. This is one casualty of the Japanese raid that turns out to be very much alive. In due course of time, fitted out with a more seaworthy bow, the Shaw no doubt will be back in the battle of the Pacific giving a good account of itself.

The Japanese, no doubt, are disappointed about the ship's resurrection—but probably as much surprised as disappointed. For it was not the Japanese who claimed that the Shaw had been destroyed in their highly destructive raid. The Japanese did not specify the names of the vessels they had destroyed; they mentioned only types.

It was Navy Secretary Knox who, returning from a flying trip to Hawaii, told his countrymen the Shaw had been destroyed.

THEY'RE BUSY TOO

Americans are convinced they will out-produce their enemies in war materials and that will end the war. But with the continental insularity that is so often their trademark they are overlooking one thing: Their enemies don't intend to let this happen.

The war industries of the opposition are busy, too. Germany and Japan are using every ounce of their strictly disciplined energy to win the war before the United States can get into it far enough to influence the outcome. That is the gamble they are making.

Their leaders have bet their prestige and their countries' destiny that the United States can't mobilize its war production fast enough to keep them from winning the war. Their factories have been turning out war material for upward of a decade. Their workmen have been toiling long hours. Since the United States has got into the war, the tempo of their already huge war production has been further increased. They are intent on winning the war before the United States can bring its armament output to bear.

In short, it is not the already great and rapidly growing output of the United States that matters. That alone is nothing to be proud of. The important thing is the output of the United States relative to the combined output of its enemies. It must overhaul them, then pass them to win the war.

AUSTRALIA BOMBED

With the incredible speed made possible by planned use of planes, ships, tanks and trucks, Japan has bombed an objective in Australia only 11 weeks after starting its drive for dominance in the southwest Pacific. Aside from the diminishing resistance offered by Gen. McArthur's army in the Philippines, the Japanese now control everything from their own island empire southward to Java, which they are bypassing to start an attack on Australia.

This amazingly fast campaign was the result of years of careful preparation and detailed planning; nothing else could have produced it. The enemy was out-manuevered at every point. Barring the possibility of successful resistance in Java and Australia, the Japanese will be able to claim one of the greatest victories of all time. By comparison, Germany's conquest of France was easy. The Germans did all their fighting on land over relatively short distances; the Japanese fought on land and sea. In their use of the airplane, moreover, they are showing at least as much, perhaps even more initiative than the inventors of the blitz campaign.

The shape of Axis strategy is plain. It is to bar effectual aid to China and Russia and thereafter to encircle Asia, with Germany striking southeast through Suez to the Arabian sea and Japan moving southwest via Singapore and Burma to the Bay of Bengal. Whether it is strategy developed in cooperation, with the aim of closing the pincers on India for mutual benefit, or strategy developed in antagonism by Germans and Japanese, each afraid the other power will get more than its share of the spoils, the effect is the same as far as the United Nations are concerned. Caught without an adequate plan of counter-attack and largely without the means of carrying out a plan if they had one, they are fighting a lopsidedly defensive battle.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, February 22

SUNDAY'S horoscope although favoring the conventional affairs of the day, heightening the mystical, spiritual and deep consciousness, yet may be visited by sudden and devastating upheavals which may upset all plans and calculations. Progress may be impeded by the necessity to hearken to duty, to care for essential obligations and to retrench on funds and other resources.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year in which all progress and success depend upon the discreet, sagacious and well controlled conduct in times of upheaval, stress and unexpected situations of a devastating nature. Wild and tumultuous acts might prove disastrous, whereas shrewd, temperate, intuitive and cannily clever handling of untoward events should attract secret help from powerful if hidden sources.

A child born on this day should be well endowed with imagination, intuition, or other vague or mysterious forces.

For Monday, February 23

Monday's astrological forecast is a rather conflicting one, with much assurance of success, progress, adventure and gratification in both business and private affairs. In this, however, there may be opposition, antagonism or lack of support from superiors or employers. But travel, writings, finances, ambitious plans and projects are under excellent rule.

Those whose birthday it is, although possibly menaced by the want of cooperation or approval of some in high places, yet should have a very lively, eventful, prosperous and happy year.

A child born on this day should be particularly clever, versatile, cultured, with noble ideals and aspirations. It should have high social and public ambitions.

GENERAL PRACTITIONERS ARE VALUABLE

They Can Handle Most of Every Family's Problems

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I WENT down into the country-side the other day to meet with a county medical society. I found a young doctor who had been in practice for about a year—he was doing general practice in a small village and was having more work than he knew what to do with. I also met his wife. She was a trained nurse whom he had met during his internship in a 1,000-bed hospital. She had never lived outside a large city until she came out to help him. She now goes out on obstetric cases with him, gives the anaesthetic, visits the babies and sees the mothers through their convalescence, and helps him with minor and emergency surgery.

She had swell eyes. Sort of blue-gray and when she began to talk, they lit up way down inside and glowed.

They must make a great team. I can imagine the neighbors saying, "Get the young doctor whose wife is a trained nurse. Evertime I got alone with one, they told me how good the other one was. He said she gave a peach of an anaesthetic and all the people liked her, she got along just fine with everybody. She bragged on what a good obstetrician he was and what a clever surgeon."

It did me good—that meeting. I felt there was some hope for the country yet if such people were carrying on. It would be great to start over again like that, young and ambitious and interested—and dauntless.

I talked to another doctor's wife that evening. She said her husband was a general practitioner too. I said I thought that was fine. She said she thought so too, but she had been sort of ashamed of it when she went to the city lately, and all the doctors at the hospital said, "Your husband, a general practitioner? My, how strange!" I said, "That is just the city's bad keep asking me where a general practitioner is."

A general practitioner is the most valuable individual a family could attach themselves to, if for no other reason, because he can see that a member of the family gets in the right hands, goes to the right specialist, if he can't handle the condition himself. She said, yes, she thought a general practitioner who knew his limitations was a valuable asset to a community. She was a very intelligent woman, and I felt like hurrahing for doctors' wives in general.

The general practitioner can handle most of your troubles anyway. There are ten thousand diseases in the world, but the first ten thousand patients the doctor gets are not going to have one of those diseases. Nine thousand of them will have one of a few—ten or twelve—common conditions that any general practitioner can handle—colds, maybe pneumonia, obstetric cases, measles, children's diseases, boils, sprains, stomach upsets, heart failure, need for a complete physical examination, nervousness, simple skin or gynecologic conditions, sore throats, conjunctivitis, etc.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

F. A. M.: Will taking three Nembutal tablets three-quarters of a grain, affect the digestion or start a habit on this drug?

Answer: This is a highly debatable question. In my opinion, daily dosage of this kind except for a complete physical examination, nervousness, simple skin or gynecologic conditions, sore throats, conjunctivitis, etc.

"THURSDAY'S CHILD" by VERA BROWN

FROM THE OLD RHYME: "THURSDAY'S CHILD HAS FAR TO GO"

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
Outside the reporters crowded around again. Sonny faced them gravely. There was nothing to say except that Mr. Corey had a lot of money in his pocket and was carrying a gun for protection. He was showing it to her and it went off.

"He was calling on you?"
"Yes."
"Are you engaged to him?"
"No."

Then she escaped.
Back at the hotel there were more reporters. But Sonny would talk to no one. She went straight to her apartment, locked and bolted the door. Then she told the operator that she was not to ring her telephone under any circumstances.

Sonny called Dice immediately. When he finally came to the phone, she told him as quickly as possible what had happened. "You've got to keep your mouth shut. Dice, no matter what you suspect. You promise?"

"I promise. I'll go to the hospital right away."
Sonny sat staring at the crimson stain on the carpet. She wondered if it were too early to call Carol. She looked at her watch. It was five o'clock.

Not until that moment did the enormity of what had happened sweep over her. She could endure the bedroom no longer and went out into the sitting-room. She paced the floor for hours, it seemed.

"Kirk!" She spoke his name aloud. Then she crumpled up on the davenport, but she was beyond tears. For her, the world had crashed around her, and she was helpless.

Somehow she must talk to Carol. But she was afraid to telephone; somebody might listen in on the conversation. Besides, the butler would not awaken her. There was nothing for Sonny to do but wait. She did not know that Carol had a direct line into her room. It had been there for a long time—for Al. Dice knew, however.

Dice called Sonny from the hospital, made the hotel operator put his call through. He tried to reassure her, said Al would be all right.

Much later, there was another call. The operator said it was from Long Island, so Sonny accepted it. Carol's hysterical voice came over the wire: "What am I to do, Sonny?"

"Nothing!" Sonny's voice was emphatic. "Do absolutely nothing, do you hear me?"
"I've got to see you."
"It isn't safe."
"I can't let you take the blame."
"Nothing can hurt me. I've nothing to lose. Don't be a fool!"
"But Sonny—"
"Keep still. I'll see you as soon as I can." With that she hung up.

It was after nine when Kirk came. "Sonny!" He held out his arms to her, shocked at her appearance. She came to him listlessly. Now that he was here, her courage ebbed completely.

"What happened?"
"What is there to say?"
"You must have been mad to let him in."
"Yes."

Kirk dropped his arms. His face was white and she had never seen his eyes like that.

"I'm not blaming you. I blame myself. I should have come up with you last night."
If he had reproached her, she could have borne it, but not this.

"Tell me."
She began her story haltingly. He stopped her: "I know, but what really happened? Had he found out about us? Was he trying to blackmail you or something?"
"Oh, no."

He was trying so hard to find an excuse. Then his temper blazed: "Don't you understand what this means to us?"
"Yes."

"I know what the headlines will be, your picture in the papers, everything all over again. Oh, Sonny, Sonny, how could you?"
Her knees suddenly weak, she sat down abruptly. "I know what

It means. The end of everything."
"What am I to do? How can we ever remedy this?"
"There isn't any remedy."
Kirk came over to her, knelt beside her:

"Why don't you be honest with me Sonny?"
"I am."

"There's something you aren't telling me."
"There's nothing to tell."
"Why did you let him in here?"
"He was drunk in the lobby making a disturbance and I thought it was better that way—" her voice faltered. Then she cried out:

"Kirk, what am I going to do now?"
He tried to comfort her, forgetting his own desperation.

"I told you I would never bring anything but trouble to anybody! Go away and leave me!"
"I'm not going to leave you, Sonny. But you can't stay here," he said abruptly.

"Where can I go?"
"I don't know." Then Kirk telephoned someone. He came back in a few minutes. "Get a few things together, I'm sending you to a nursing home here in New York. You'll be safe there for a couple of days. You need a rest."

That night, promptly at eight o'clock, cut at Hollister Hall, 60 guests sat down to the dinner party which was to announce Carol's engagement. If the rouge on the bride-to-be's cheeks stood out startlingly, everybody put it down to the excitement of the great occasion. Kirk looked tired and worn. Brother and sister, each unconscious of the other's misery, carried on.

Dick was in a seventh heaven, ignorant of Carol's connection with Al's attempted suicide.

Mrs. Hollister carried her head high. Never for a moment would she permit anybody to think that the shooting of the morning had had anything to do with her family out here on Long Island.

Janice looked her prettiest. Next morning, the newspapers carried the latest Broadway scandal on their front pages accompanied by a large photograph of Sonny, and their society pages noted that

Mr. and Mrs. Kirkland T. Hollister, Sr., of Great Neck, Long Island, announced the engagement of their daughter, Carol Alyce, to Richard Warren Rockford of New York.

It was Mrs. Metzger who supervised the closing of Sonny's apartment for Sonny said she would never enter it again.

The scandal had subsided. Al would live.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Metzger and Kirk went to visit Sonny in the nursing home.

Kirk arranged to see Sonny alone first. When she came into the sitting room, he kissed her.

"You're thinner," he said. Sonny could not answer him. When she regained her composure she asked: "There isn't anything for me to do but go away, is there?"
"No."

"They wouldn't take me back at school, I know that."

Kirk did not comment. In that moment he loved her more than ever. She was so utterly defenseless. Finally, he suggested: "What about Europe? Mrs. Metzger will go with you."

"I'll go anywhere you say, but make it quick. I'll go mad staying here."

Kirk called Mrs. Metzger. She was shocked when she saw Sonny. Taking her into her arms, she comforted: "We'll have a grand time, dear, really we will. We'll forget all about this silly business—"

"How soon can we start?" Sonny asked abruptly.

"There's the matter of passports," Kirk said. "Maybe five or six days. I'll arrange reservations."

Two days later, Carol came to see Sonny.

"I can't go on letting you shoulder the responsibility, Sonny. I feel like a criminal."

"What difference does it make?"

News OF THE Day IN Pictures

Rescued From U. S. Outposts

This is the first picture to reach the United States showing the six survivors of the tiny band of U. S. student aerologists stationed on Howland and Baker islands, which were attacked by Japanese forces shortly after the war began. The six, shown after their rescue, include rear, left to right, James Pease, James Coyle and Thomas Bederman, and front, Walter Burke, Blue Makua and Elvin Mattson. Howland and Baker islands, 30 miles apart, are but specks in the vast Pacific and lie southeast of the Japanese-occupied Marshall islands, which the U. S. successfully attacked.

Terry in Camp—on Sidelines

—I. L. N. Phonophoto
Mel Ott and Bill Terry
For the first time in 27 years, Bill Terry, new general manager of the New York Giants' farm system, is on the sidelines in the Giants' training camp. Terry's 1941 job as manager of the New York club now is held by Mel Ott, the outfielder-third baseman shown conversing with Terry at Miami, Fla.

Motorists to Keep Old Tags?

Joseph H. Brophy with new plate
To help conserve metal for the war effort, U. S. motorists may be using their same license plates again next year, with probably a new year tag on a narrow strip of metal given to motorists to attach over the old date. Warden Joseph H. Brophy of the Auburn, N. Y., prison, where New York state license plates are made, shows what New York plans.

New Zealand Builds Defenses Against Invasion

March of Time from "Far East Command"
The Japanese bombing of the Sunda Islands, stretching east of Java toward New Guinea and Australia, has brought home to New Zealand the importance of being prepared for the Japs. Top, guns are being readied at Fort Dorset. Bottom, soldiers are shown digging trenches, ready for hand fighting in the event of a Japanese invasion.

Fighting Off Japanese Planes At Darwin

Anti-aircraft gunners at Darwin, Australia, man their weapon as they scour the sky for attacking enemy planes. This is one of the many units protecting the north Australian port which has been heavily bombed by Japanese planes in what is seen as a prelude to invasion. There was considerable property damage. Port Darwin is one of the chief United Nations naval bases in the southwest Pacific.

Last Journey of Washington Was to His Grist Mill

The mill today
George Washington (1732-1799)
A very important possession of George Washington, and yet one almost entirely overlooked by historians, was the Dogue Run grist mill, near Mount Vernon, which Washington visited as his last trip before he fell sick and died. The mill, built by Washington's father between the years 1735-39, continued to run for many years after Washington's death in 1799 but it gradually fell into decay as time went on. About 12 years ago interest was revived in it, and restoration was begun. In the past few months the mill has been opened to the public for the first time.

COMFORTABLE SHOES ESSENTIAL FOR WAR WORK

Left, flag blue calfskin oxford; center, crushed leather oxford; right, motor corp oxford
If you have volunteered for any of the patriotic services, you'll find it very important to have comfortable feet. There is now a complete war-time shoe wardrobe, three of the models from which are shown above. At the left is an AWVS shoe in smooth flag blue calfskin. It is an ankle-fitting oxford that harmonizes with all the uniforms designed for the distaff side of the Civilian Defense army. It is well-made, with an inner and outer sole for greater comfort and protection. Center, the young air raid warden is wearing a crushed leather oxford for comfort during hours of patrol duty. It has only three eyelets to facilitate dressing in a hurry, extra breadth across the ball of the foot, and snugly fitting heels. The shoe, right, is for work in the motor corps and all automobile driving. It is a sturdy oxford with a ventilated vamp made of crushed calfskin with an extra eyelet at the ankle for a super-snug fit. These shoes were designed by Julius Grossman, noted shoe designer.

Quakers Coast In To Easy 30-19 Triumph Over Struthers Five

SALEM COPS 14TH; WIND UP REGULAR CAMPAIGN FRIDAY

"Big Six" Looks Good In Conquest Of Big Red Quintet

Racking up an 18-4 lead in the first half, the well-balanced scoring barrage, the Salem Quakers coasted in to a 30-19 over the Struthers Big Red quintet last night at Struthers. The victory was the 13th for the locals this year and the loss the 11th of the campaign for the luckless Struthers five.

The Quakers jumped off to a 9-3 lead in the initial frame as Capt. Ray McGaffick flipped in three straight attempts from way out. His first two were from behind the middle of the non-to-spacious Big Red court and the third from a corner. Sammy Pridon added to the Salem total as he tallied from underneath the hoop. The Struthers scoring in this period was confined to a bucket by Orenic and a free throw by Don McPhee, the home team's high point man.

In the second quarter, the Quakers added nine more markers to their score while holding the Struthers netters to one lone charity pitch. This spree practically sewed up the game but the Struthers five was not finished as they soon proved. Their assault hit its peak in the following stanza as they outscored the Quakers by a 9-5 count to trail by 23-13 at the end of three quarters of play. Their attack died out in the early minutes of the final chapter and the game was as good as over as Coach Herb Brown substituted frequently to experiment with different combinations of players. The locals outscored the Big Red by one point in this period to protect their 10 point margin.

Brown Juggles Lineup

Coach Herb Brown juggled his starting lineup last night as he sent Carl Capel to the post in place of Sal Guappone and shifted McGaffick to the back court. The move looked like a good one as McGaffick found his favorite spot on the floor to part the cords with two long ones. When Guappone entered the fray late in the first period, McGaffick was returned to the corner slot and the Salem passing attack smoothed out somewhat as Guappone and Johnny Vello did a fine job in the back court. McGaffick's scoring efforts were throttled from there on in as he found two men on him each time he tried to shoot.

Capel, Bob Scullion and Sammy Pridon did some fine rebound work under the basket and accounted for a pair of scores on tip-ins of rebounds. All did their share underneath the hoop as they came down time after time with the ball, much to surprise and dismay of the taller Struthers squad. Guappone and Vello, not to mention McGaffick, all did their part in downing the Big Red team. All broke into the scoring with Pridon, McGaffick and Capel, each with eight, seven, and six points respectively while Guappone tossed in two buckets and Scullion and Vello notched two free throws each.

The Quakers did a fine piece of defensive work in stopping the diminutive Don McPhee who has been shining in the box scores lately for the Big Red five. He hit exactly one bucket, a beautifully arched long shot, and converted three foul tosses. Along with Schilling, who garnered six points, all on long shots, he led the Struthers team in the box score.

Quakers End Campaign

Next Friday night, the Quakers wind up the regular season as they meet the Sebring Trojans on the local court. After that tilt, Coach Brown will prepare his charges for the sectional tournament in Youngstown to begin in the near future. Drawings for tourney bracketing will be made next Wednesday evening at a meeting of all the cage coaches of the district.

With 13 wins already chalked up, the locals hope to make it No. 14 against the Trojans who have made several impressive showings this year. In the preliminary, the Salem reserves will seek their 15th win against a tough Sebring reserve squad which has lost only three games in its last 30 or so. Varsity game time will be 8:45 p. m.

BOWLING RESULTS

The league-leading Meissner team of the Federal league kept rolling last night on the Masonic alleys as they tripped the third place Eagles twice. Their nearest threat, Sheen's, copied the same number from Brownies to keep right behind the pace setters. Ward clipped off a 216 for the winners while M. Miller fired a 203 for Brownies.

With Bill Merry blasting out an even 200 game to set the pace, the Sanitary Foremen came through with a shutout win over Beeler's. Karcher had a 194 game for the losers. In the last match, the Sanitary Shippers took a pair from the K. of C. as Mike Zatkoff hit a 223 and a 590 series.

The Colonial Finance keggers returned to their winning ways last night on the Grate alleys as they scored a three game win over Endres-Gross. Freda Orr and Helen Caldwell rolled series of 548 and 542 respectively while Ruth Hine trailed with a 516. Orr hit high game, 192.

Coy's, eight games behind the Financers, before last night's matches, fell another game behind the pace setters as they took only two from Schwartz's. Louise Hans fired an even 200 for the winners in the third game.

Haidt's could not hold the pace and dropped two to the Eagles No. 1 team as Ann Akens showed the way with high series. In other matches, Kaufman's topped the Salem China twice and Trades Class did likewise to Eagles No. 2. Helen Kaley took high series honors for the match between the Chinas and Kaufman's, while Dorothy Greene was awarded the same honor in the Trades Class-Eagles match.

A match between the A. A. A. and Hi-Ho was postponed.

REDS GO THROUGH DOUBLE DRILL AT TRAINING CAMP

Rollie Hemsley Working Hard; Pleased To Be Back With Cincy

(By Associated Press)
TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 21.—Instead of dipping a toe into spring practice waters, the Cincinnati Reds plunged in up to their necks today as Manager Bill McKechnie—not a man to make the same mistake twice—ordered two workouts.

In addition to getting organized, the Redleg batteries even got a little work in on the soggy field yesterday, their check-in day.

McKechnie came out of grapefruit-land last spring admitting that he never had brought back a team so ill-prepared for the campaign. In losing 17 of their first 27 games while Brooklyn was winning 21 of 27, the Redlegs bore him out. The Dodgers gained only one game on the Reds after that disastrous first month, but they do count those games near the start, too.

This spring McKechnie means business. Barring injuries, hard work ought to have the club ready come April 14.

Of the 18 pitchers and catchers in the 34-player roster, only three twirlers weren't on hand yesterday; and one of them—Monte Pearson, former Yankee—is testing an ailing arm with a coast league club temporarily.

Another, Les Hinkle, curve-ball-er from Syracuse, was on his way from Hancock, Md.; and the third, southpaw Jim Prendergast, up from Little Rock, is awaiting a reclassification by his draft board of a 4-F status which he believes may be changed to 1-A.

Wearing uniform No. 7—which Johnny Riddle left to manage Birmingham—Catcher Rollie Hemsley was first on and last off the field in the initial workout. The former Cleveland Indian declared that he "was sure pleased" to be back with the Reds. He caught 49 games for the Redlegs in 1933 and batted .190.

What to Save

Begin now to save:
Scrap metals—Iron, steel, brass, copper, aluminum, lead, etc. Dispose of discarded tools, metal beds, stoves, pots and pans, pipe and hardware, batteries and anything else made of metal except tin cans.
Old rags—Cast-off clothing, bur-lap bags, draperies, mattresses, pillows, discarded carpets, etc.
Old rubber—Discarded auto tires and tubes, overshoes, etc.
Do not discard anything that is still useful and that might have to be replaced.

Telegrams Tell Story

STUEBENVILLE, Feb. 21.—Passing his verdict on two telegrams found near the body, Coroner Ray Eise said grief and shock contributed to the death of John Kala, 43, miner of nearby Barclay. The first message said Kala's son, Albin, runner on a warship, had been lost in action. A later wire assured the father that his son was alive and well.

Launch Twin Threats To Axis At Kearney Ship Yards

U. S. Army Signal Corps Photopho

Two more destroyers soon destined to join in the fight against the Axis powers are launched at the federal shipbuilding yards, Kearney, N. J. at left is U. S. S. Duncan, at right, U. S. S. Lansdowne. In a letter read at the launching, Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews declared that "it is entirely possible for us to launch two warships every day and, if need be, we could make it a triple event."
